Discover the Buzet Winemakers

Buzet is a charming village on the left bank of the delightful river Baise, in the heart of the South-west and the Garonne Valley. Since the days of the Roman legions, this "land of good living" has enjoyed a history as varied as the soils on the slopes of the twenty-seven communes in the appellation area.

Nearby, the vast Landes forest, the largest in Europe, pleasantly tempers the ocean climate. This climate and the local soils are both ideal for vines and have led to the planting and development of one of the oldest wine regions in France.

The Buzet Winemakers cooperative was founded in 1953 as a result of local winegrowers' desire to see their wine flourish as it had done in the centuries gone by. Initially VDQS, the Buzet wine region was awarded "Appellation Contrôlée" status in 1973.

The wine region is bordered by the Garonne on one side and the Landes forest on the other, and now extends over 2000 hectares in production, planted on 40 km of slopes in the Pays d'Albret.
